celebrating stoli's tastemakers

Stoli partnered with Los Angeles Confidential to celebrate some of LA's most influential tastemakers. To fête them, guests gathered for a party at the SLS Hotel at Beverly Hills, which drew a beautiful crowd and honorees including John Simonian, Adam Gross, Jeremy Berlin, Cameron Silver, Margaret Morici, Jeffrey Abramson, Mattia Biagi, and Valerj Pobega. Partygoers were among the first to experience Stoli's newest flavor, Chocolat Razberi, as they munched on hors d'oeuvres from The Bazaar by José Andrés. The music of another honoree, DJ Benjamin Walker, set the tone for the evening as partygoers mingled in the uberchic hotel designed by Philippe Starck.

Raymond Weil Geneve and pop musician Andy Grammer hosted an exclusive cocktail party to benefit the VHI Save the Music program at the The Beverly Hilton. Guests chatted with Grammer, who serves as a spokesperson for the foundation, while shopping for timepieces. Ten percent of the evening's watch sales benefited the program, which works to restore music education in America's public schools.
