◀ Chopard's Imperiale collection ($8,440 in 18K rose gold and steel), which debuted in the 1990s, has an updated look for today's woman. These Imperiales present an array of style options, from a dainty 28 mm version to a sportier two-tone model. At Neiman Marcus

▶ Harry Winston Midnight watches ($18,200 for 32 mm with diamonds) blend grace and glamour for a seamless transition from day to night. Ladies choose from two sizes with or without the house's famed diamonds, while gentlemen have the option of a simple Automatic or Big Date version. At Harry Winston, South Coast Plaza

◀ Girard-Perregaux's 1966 Small Second ($22,995) traces its design codes back to the brand's 19th-century pocket watches. The dial is made of enamel, further endowing this stunner with refined character for the ages. At Westime, La Jolla

THE CLASSICIST

These elegant watches were crafted to take you from boardroom to ballroom with equal aplomb.

▶ IWC's Portofino Automatic ($11,700) was revamped this year, along with the rest of the Portofino family. Up-sized to 40 mm with refined case contours, the Automatic in red gold features an engraving of Portofino harbor on the case back. At Tourneau, Fashion Valley

▶ Van Cleef & Arpels' Pierre Arpels ($34,300) makes classic au courant with its embossed lacquer dial surrounded by dazzling diamonds and a slim profile thanks to a Piaget 830 ultrathin manual-wind movement. At Neiman Marcus

▲ Bulgari's Endurer Chronosprint All Blacks ($16,300) signifies the house's collaboration with New Zealand's All Blacks rugby team with a distinctive Maori tattoo pattern on the dial. At Neiman Marcus

▲ Hublot's Big Bang Black Caviar ($9,900) is made of resilient, high-tech ceramic that's been cut, polished and set with the same precision as the black diamonds that cover the brand's $1 million Black Caviar model. At Tourneau, Fashion Valley

◀ Dior's Dior VIII collection ($7,500), fashioned from slick black ceramic with pyramid-shaped bracelet links, evokes Monsieur Dior's love of architecture, haute couture and his lucky number: eight. At Westime, La Jolla

▶ Chanel's Premiere Triple Row ($9,900) sleekly encases your wrist with an extra-long steel and ceramic link bracelet. At Traditional Jewelers, Fashion Island

▶ Hermès' Cape Cod Grandes Heures ($8,700) reflects how the passage of time can sometimes feel, with an hour hand that speeds up or slows down to accommodate the uneven spaces between the numbers on its face. Meanwhile, the minute and second hands keep a constant pace. Choose from three versions. At Hermès, Fashion Valley

THE TRENDSETTER

If life on fashion's front lines is where you thrive, these chic watches will complement your up-to-the-minute style.
